

The Eternal Expatriate, Part Two

The Eternal Expatriate Part Two is a story in its own right, about a twenty-year-old Slovene, Tony Ayles, arriving into the realm of H.M. Queen Elisabeth II. He was a freshly qualified technician, who sought and found employment but could not resist the English roses he encountered. Having been promoted to a Service Engineer, he was sent to Mauritania, West Africa to a place with a fateful name: Place de Diable. Upon return to England, he married one of the English roses and had a daughter. Due to his insatiable quest for progress at work, he then went to Germany, taking his wife and daughter with him and where he settled down, and is still there today. A memorable story, informative and entertaining, it takes the reader through several countries with principal events taking place in England and Germany.
